1. Informational Report on the AlcoholEdu Program

As part of the University’s ongoing efforts to educate students about the negative consequences associated with high-risk alcohol consumption, Penn State has begun to require incoming students to complete an online learning module called "AlcoholEdu". This alcohol education program is completed by more than 400,000 college students nationwide each year. Its purpose is to increase students' practical knowledge about alcohol misuse, to increase students’ awareness of the impact of alcohol on memory and learning, and to motivate changes in behavior.

A panel led by Ms. Gail Hurley, Interim Vice President for Student Affairs, will provide a historical view of Penn State’s efforts to curb high risk drinking, discuss the data that is collected on alcohol consumption and describe the content and implementation of the AlcoholEdu program. Panelists include Dr. Margaret Spear, Senior Director of University Health Services, Dr. Linda LaSalle, Coordinator of Health Education Services and Dr. Linda Higginson, Assistant Dean for Advising.
