A meeting of the Board of Trustees was held in Room 302 of the University Fitness and Conference Center, Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, at 1:30 p.m. on March 15, 2013.

The following Trustees were present: Masser (chairman), Deviney (vice chairman), Alexander, Allan, Arnelle, Broadhurst, Clemens, Cotner, Dambly, Eckel, Erickson, Frazier, Greig, Hayes, Hintz, Huber, Khoury, Lubert, Lubrano, McCombie, Myers, Peetz, Shaffer, Silvis, Strumpf, Suhey, Taliaferro, and Tomalis; and Trustees Emeritus/a Coppersmith, Robinson, and Wolff; and Branstetter.

Present by invitation were faculty representatives Backer, Yarnal, and Hufnagel; student representatives Clark, Fisher, and Lennartz; ALC chair, David Hall; and staff members Basso, DiRaimo, Dunham, Foley, Gaudelius, Gray, Hall, Kirsch, Mulroy-Degenhart, Pangborn, Paz, Poole, Sims, and Weidemann.

Chairman Masser had the following remarks:

"Good afternoon, everyone. I am delighted that we're at the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center for our meeting today. This area has been my home for nearly my entire life; my family’s home and my business are just 40 miles north of Hershey. I have seen, first-hand, the benefits of having a leading Medical Center and College of Medicine so close to our community. And, as a member of the Board of Directors at the Medical Center, I see the vital role this institution plays in our University and the Commonwealth. This operation is at the center of life-saving care and well-being, world-class research and clinical application, and unparalleled dedication to patients and families. Spending time on this campus serves as an inspiration for all.

"To that end, on behalf of the Board of Trustees, I wish to extend my deepest congratulations to everyone involved with THON. Beyond the record total raised—$12.4 million, the students involved in this effort exemplify the very best of Penn State. When I hear Penn State students speak so enthusiastically about their work for kids, I feel their optimism for the future and I’m grateful for the opportunity to contribute to their efforts. I have also been gratified to see the student engagement moving to elementary and middle schools throughout the state, with MiniTHONs, which now contribute about $1.5 million to the overall effort. President Erickson will have more to say about THON during his remarks."

Chairman Masser then thanked Dr. Harold L. Paz, Senior Vice President for Health Affairs; Dean, College of Medicine; Chief Executive Officer, for hosting the Board meeting and called upon him for his remarks.

Dr. Paz welcomed everyone to the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center and Hershey, Pennsylvania.

Chairman Masser welcomed University Faculty Senate Officers Larry Backer, Brent Yarnal, and Pam Hufnagel; Student Representatives Ben Clark, Wanika Fisher, and Courtney Lennartz; and Academic Leadership Council Chair David Hall. Chairman Masser noted that this would be the final meeting of the student and faculty senate representatives to the Board, and thanked all for their service; each of the student representatives were invited to make a brief statement to the Board.

Following the statements provided by the student representatives, Chair Masser also welcomed the Constituent Representatives to Board committees: Roger Egolf, Ginny Hosterman, Crystal Hubler, and Katelyn Mullen.
Chairman Masser continued with the following remarks:

"Before proceeding with the day's business, I wish to update you on a few new and ongoing initiatives.

"There's an old adage that says, 'May you have the misfortune to live in interesting times.' Indeed, these are interesting times, and they're not over yet. We're moving forward with the presidential search, and last month took the important step of naming the executive search firm that will assist us in attracting the most qualified candidates. Isaacson, Miller, with offices in Boston, Washington, D.C., and San Francisco, was selected for a number of reasons, in particular for their emphasis on a collaborative approach with the community. They also have an excellent track record in searches of this kind. The firm plans to begin the process by reaching out to the University's many constituents through public forums, focus groups and an online Presidential Search website. Just launched, this site will allow the Penn State community to communicate directly with Isaacson Miller. There will be links to submit nominees, suggestions and feedback throughout the process. This information will be considered during the development of a position profile and identification of appropriate candidates. The web address is www.presidentialsearch.psu.edu. In addition, Isaacson Miller will work closely with the Trustee Presidential Selection Council and the Presidential Search and Screen Committee, which is chaired by Nan Crouter, Dean of the College of Health and Human Development. Both of these committees will also be soliciting feedback, and I urge everyone to stay abreast of the developments.

"Last month I was privileged to attend the Hershey Winter Academy, which was held in Naples, Florida. This annual event offers alumni and friends the opportunity to hear from outstanding physicians, scientists and scholars, who highlight new initiatives and medical innovations. This year was exceptionally well attended, and the presentations were fascinating. Particularly notable was Dr. Paz's presentation on disruptive innovations and the future of medicine. It was a great presentation among many, and it was very well received. I was also encouraged and impressed by the level of commitment of our alumni, donors and friends. Their service and financial support are essential for furthering the work underway at the Medical Center and College of Medicine. I was delighted to be able to represent Penn State at this annual gathering.

"I was also pleased to join Dr. Pangborn at the announcement of the Governor's budget proposal. Although we're hopeful that the legislature and the Governor will find additional funding for higher education, we're pleased the recommendation doesn't include the level of cuts we have seen in recent years. Rod did an excellent job representing our interests during the House and Senate Appropriation Hearings, and we will continue the discussions with the legislators in the weeks ahead.

"Later this afternoon, Jim Broadhurst will report on the Governance and Long-Range Planning Committee's initial discussion of Board reforms as suggested by the Freeh Report, the Auditor General and more recently the University Faculty Senate's Special Committee on University Governance. I encourage everyone to stay with us to hear that important report.

"One final note: on April 2nd, Rod will be honored with the second annual 'Way Pavers' Award,' which is being given by Penn State's Council of College Multicultural Leaders. The purpose of the award is to honor individuals, from the University as well as the surrounding community, who have contributed to supporting diversity initiatives, which have positively enhanced student life and the climate throughout the community, while maintaining a high level of character and leadership. To quote his nominator, 'President Erickson is a champion for diversity at the University and supports the work of multicultural leaders in the academic colleges.' Please join me in congratulating Rod on this well-deserved honor!" [Applause]"

It was voted to approve the minutes of the meeting of the Board held on January 18, 2013.
President's Report

Dr. Erickson's report is included as follows:

"Thank you, Keith.

"And special thanks to Hal Paz, Senior Vice President for Health Affairs and CEO of the Penn State Hershey Medical Center, and the many faculty, staff, and students, who have been so welcoming and helpful throughout our Board visit. Holding our March meeting on this campus has become an annual tradition, and one that reflects the strong connections the Medical Center and College of Medicine have within our University and the Commonwealth. One of the most visible reminders of our connection is through THON, which was held last month.

"Often when we talk about THON, we recount the numbers--15,000 students involved in a 46-hour event; helping 2,000 families; a record-breaking $12.4 million raised this year; more than $100 million raised since 1977. But the Four Diamonds Fund and THON are really about the individual stories of courage, resilience, inspiration, and ultimately hope. It's an honor to spend time with our Four Diamonds families and to see the progress made possible through medical science. It's also an honor to spend time with the physicians, researchers and many medical professionals who care for these families. As one former THON overall chair said, 'We set our sights, not on the money, but on helping the kids.' Thank you to everyone who has contributed their support to this incredible event.

"As you know, we are in the midst of what feels like an unprecedented number of searches for senior positions at Penn State. I'm heartened by the many top notch individuals vying for the positions, and to hear their enthusiasm for Penn State's mission. Today, I'm pleased to introduce two such individuals.

"Beginning April 1st, Regis Becker will begin as the University's first Director of Ethics and Compliance. Regis comes to Penn State from PPG Industries, where he served as the Chief Compliance Officer. In this position, he coordinated the multifaceted compliance program at a $15 billion global company with 40,000 employees and manufacturing operations in 38 countries. He also managed the PPG Crisis Response Unit. Previously, Regis managed investigative functions at Union Carbide Corporation, and he served as a special agent with the FBI. Regis earned a Bachelor of Science in Law Enforcement at Penn State, an MBA at Western Connecticut State University and a J.D. at Duquesne University School of Law. Regis, would you please stand and be recognized? [Applause]

"Thank you.

"I also want to introduce Julie Del Giorno, who will be Penn State's first athletics integrity officer. Julie will be responsible for the development, implementation and oversight of policies and practices within the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics that ensure compliance and ethical conduct. Julie comes to Penn State from Moravian College and Moravian Theological Seminary, where she served as chief of staff and as the senior administrator with athletic oversight for the college's NCAA Division III Athletics program. Previously, she held coaching and administrative positions at the University of Central Arkansas and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. From 1986 to 1995, Julie served as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Army, and was honored for her service during combat operations with the U.S. Army's Bronze Star Medal. Julie earned a Bachelor of Science degree from the U.S. Military Academy and an MBA from the University of Central Arkansas. Julie, would you please stand to be recognized? [Applause]

"Thank you.
"This is the time of year when we expect a degree of budget uncertainty based on the state appropriation deliberations. This year, however, the greater uncertainty is the matter of sequestration, which will affect our federal research funding and some of our student aid programs, such as the Work Study Program. The main question is how much? And we won't know that answer for some time, but it could be in the $30-$40 million ballpark, with our most research-active colleges, including the College of Medicine, and the Applied Research Lab experiencing a disproportionate share of the impacts. In the meantime, we're concentrating on making our case for improved future funding to our state legislators. I was pleased to represent Penn State's interests at the House and Senate appropriations hearings in late February, and to have the opportunity to discuss funding for the agricultural research and cooperative extension lines and other special needs. It was clear that the legislators are deeply concerned with affordability as well as completion rates.

"For Penn State students who begin their studies at University Park, the average time-to-degree is 4.2 years and the 6-year graduation rate is 87 percent. Given that 62 percent of our Commonwealth Campus students work more than 22 hours a week on average, or complete their degree at another college or university, it is understandable that those graduation rates are lower and hover around 55 percent. Last year, we held tuition to the lowest increase in 45 years, and I've committed to the Governor and leadership of the General Assembly that we will have another modest increase next academic year.

"As I do at each meeting, I'll provide a brief admissions update. Margaret Mead said, 'Always remember that you are absolutely unique. Just like everyone else.' I bring up that quote, because it so aptly applies to this year's class of applicants. They are unique—or at least compared to prior years. First, the high school class of 2013 seems to be applying to fewer places, and notably, they're settling on a school somewhat earlier. Consistent with this trend, our applications for admission are down about nine percent compared to last year, but our yield rate, that is, students who have accepted and have submitted their deposits, continues to track ahead of last year. University Park is up three percentage points in yield, and the Commonwealth Campuses are up one percentage point. International applications continue to show double digit increases, and the yield rate is up compared to last year for this entering cohort as well. All in all, the incoming class is very strong, and the total number of students who have committed to Penn State is virtually identical to last year. The quality of the applicants is also consistent with past years.

"Hal will be discussing the College of Medicine in his remarks, but it's noteworthy that applications to the Penn State College of Medicine are up five percent. The new crop of students will be taking the place of our graduating medical students, who earlier today attended the Match Day Ceremony to learn where they'll serve their residency. If you see any smiling and relieved medical students today, be sure to offer your congratulations.

"This year, the World Campus celebrated its 15th anniversary. Launched with just 41 students in five academic programs in 1998, today the World Campus has nearly 12,000 fully online students in more than 90 programs. It has also seen five straight years of double digit enrollment growth, and a number of awards for excellence in academic programming. Most recently Penn State's World Campus launched its first online graduate nursing degree. We can expect additional innovative programming to come.

"A related new initiative is Penn State's foray into MOOCs—Massive Open Online Courses through Coursera. We're testing the waters with five courses, led by an engaging and intellectual group-among them Richard Alley, Peter Hudson, Andrew Read and Anna Divinsky. Penn State's initial offerings range from Art to Energy to Entrepreneurship, and the response has been overwhelming. About 45,000 students have already enrolled, with nearly 1,000 more signing up each day. Our goal with this MOOC initiative is to advance key University priorities, including showcasing faculty expertise, testing innovative learning strategies, engaging with communities around the world and attracting students to continue their education at Penn State, either in-person or online. In addition, MOOCs offer high school students an opportunity to pre-shop for college majors and provide existing students with a way to supplement their learning. You too can become a 'coursarian' as the students call themselves. To register, visit www.coursera.org."
"Penn State has also given our web presence a facelift with a graphically appealing, more user friendly new interface. It's the first major redesign in more than a decade. The new design was led by University Relations and IT Communications, and involved representatives from across the University. I urge you to explore the site; and to visit news.psu.edu, formerly called Live. Kevin Mooroney, Vice Provost of Information Technology, and Cindy Hall, Interim Chief Marketing officer in University Relations led the effort. Cindy is with us, so please join me in recognizing her for her excellent work. [Applause]

"The talents of Penn State students were on full display this spring. In February, we held the 7th annual Penn State President's Concert at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington, D.C. It is always remarkable to see the same students who shuffle along our campus walkways in cargo pants and t-shirts transform into virtuoso performers to rival many professionals. The beautifully executed concert featured the Penn State Concert Choir, Symphonic Wind Ensemble, Baroque Ensemble, Brass Ensemble, a marimba duo and a piano soloist. Pipe organ accompaniment was provided by internationally acclaimed organist William Neil, a 1966 Penn State alumnus and 2011 Penn State Alumni Fellow.

"Penn State College of Communications students were also in the spotlight when their weekly newscast was named the best in the nation. Two students also captured first-place in individual categories in the prestigious Broadcast Education Association Festival of Media Arts, a nationwide competition honoring the best in faculty and student-produced media.

"Not to be outdone, four Smeal College of Business students recently returned from the Marshall International Case Competition with a third-place trophy—the highest position of all participating American universities. The Smeal team, led by case team director Andy Gustafson, Assistant Professor of Business Administration, included marketing major Devin Weakland, actuuarial science and economics major Benjamin Pugh, accounting and finance major Nicholas Fakelmann, and supply chain and information systems major Samantha Jarmul. Professor Gustafson said, 'Nick, Devin, Ben and Samantha were not only great competitors, but also great ambassadors for Penn State.'

"Employers have taken note of our students' abilities, and more than 300 employers have signed up for Penn State's Spring Career Days, which will be held in the Bryce Jordan Center on March 20 and 21. The employers will be hiring for internship, full-time and co-op positions. This is part of our continuing commitment to helping our students successfully navigate the transition from college to career.

"Each year, many Penn State students choose to begin their professional life with organizations like Teach for America or the Peace Corps. This year, the Peace Corps ranked Penn State alumni among the nation's top collegiate volunteers. With 55 undergraduate alumni serving overseas and working in fields such as agriculture, education, environment, health, community economic development and youth development, Penn State is number 21 on the Peace Corps' 2013 rankings of colleges and universities in the large school category.

"This academic year, Penn State student-athletes won seven Big Ten Championships, which is a Penn State record! And earlier this month, eight Penn State teams were ranked in the Top 10 nationally in their respective sports. Among those leaders were the Nittany Lion wrestlers, ranked number one throughout the year. They lived up to that billing once again, winning their third straight Big Ten Championship. Head coach Cael Sanderson has now won three Big Ten crowns in his four years at Penn State. As a matter of fact, since taking over the program, Cael and his staff are a perfect 13 and 0 in coaching Big Ten Tournament Finals matches! The Nittany Lions will next head to Des Moines, Iowa, for the 2013 NCAA Wrestling Championships on March 21-23. Penn State will be looking to win its third straight NCAA title.
"Congratulations go to the Lady Lions, who are the back-to-back Big 10 regular season champions. Maggie Lucas was selected as the 2013 Big Ten Player of the Year as well as for this year's First Team Big Ten All-Tournament team. Next for the Lady Lions is the NCAA Tournament. The selection show is slated for Monday, so we can look forward to more great basketball in the days to come.

"After an outstanding indoor season, the Nittany Lion men's track team finished ninth at the NCAA Indoor Championships. This is a young team, and with runners like freshman Brannon Kidder and sophomore Robby Creese, also known as 'Creese Lightning.' We can expect to see more outstanding performances in the next several years.

"Earlier this month, Coach Bill O'Brien and the 2012 football senior class were honored by the Maxwell Football Club as the Club's College Coach of the Year and Spirit Award recipients, respectively. You'll be able to get a first look at this year's team on Blue-White Weekend, which is set for April 19-21, with kickoff at noon on Saturday. Numerous events will be held during the weekend to showcase our student athletes, including the 2013 NCAA Men's Gymnastics Championships in Rec Hall. In addition, the Penn State baseball, field hockey, men's golf, softball, men's tennis, women's tennis and men's volleyball teams will also be competing at home during Blue-White Weekend. I hope you'll join us.

"In development news, we're making the final push to meet the ambitious $2 billion goal in 'For the Future: The Campaign for Penn State Students.' We are continuing to stay ahead of schedule for achieving our goal, and we have made significant progress in annual giving over the last year. Penn State staff and students have been particularly supportive in the annual giving effort, and they deserve our sincerest appreciation. The number of alumni donors to the Annual Fund is on pace with last year, and the dollars raised are running 21% ahead of last year through the end of February. The largest single goal of 'For the Future' has been to raise money for student scholarships. Already we've raised $100 million in scholarship endowments through the Trustee Matching Scholarship Program. But we're reaching higher. To provide an additional incentive for giving, we're now offering an even greater incentive to help students in need. As of this month, the Trustee Matching Scholarship Program offers a 10% annual match for new endowed gifts, doubling the additional funds available for students. Of note is a recent $2 million gift from Gene and Roz Chaiken. They already have made the dreams of a Penn State education possible for more than 150 Liberal Arts students through a Trustee Scholarship they created five years ago. But with growing financial challenges facing students and their families, the Chaikens decided to establish one of the first Trustee Scholarships to earn a 10% annual match from the University. Gene and Roz have been active volunteers and lead donors to the College of the Liberal Arts and Penn State for many years. Gene served on the Penn State Board of Trustees for several years and is a member of the University's Leadership Gifts Committee and an emeritus member of the Liberal Arts Development Council.

"I'll conclude my remarks with some photos from a fall Photojournalism class in the College of Communications. [Slides shown]

"Now I'll be happy to take your questions."

President Erickson received questions or comments concerning:
• Compliance comparisons with other universities
